SHERIFF PENDER TALKS

To a Reporter about Liquor Situation In Auburn.

High Sheriff John Pender of the county Rockingham says it's a case of too many cocks spoil the broth over in Auburn. If they'd only let him alone, he says, he'd show them. Sheriff Pender was at Tilton Tuesday on an insurance case and came to Manchester late in the afternoon on his way back to Portsmouth. He got in at 3:19, and being obliged to remain until the 4:20 train to the seaport town, thought he'd run over to Massabesic station on the electric.

"Pender" is more of a name to conjure with around Lake Massabesic than "Otis" is in the Philippines, and when the medium sized portly gentleman with white mustache alighted from a trolley car at Massabesic the word went down to the grove: "Cheese it; Pender's here; what do you suppose it means?"

Mr. Pender got off the car, looked around, met an acquaintance, and took a walk down to the grove, close to the lake waters. He told about it to an inquisitive Mirror reporter afterwards, seated on some freight at the Massabesic station of the Boston and Maine, which lies between the grove and the street railway pavilion.

"Sorry I came out here, now," says he. "I supposed somebody'd just go and send word to the city that I was here, and then there'd be a devil of a stew about it. I was up to Tilton on business and seeing that I had some time to spare I just took it into my head to ride out on the electric and look around. Just as I got off the car I ran into Jim Dunn and talked with him a bit and so I walked down into the grove to have a further talk with him. The way I happened to be talking with Bill McPherson was that while Jim and I were talking Bill came out of the Rockingham and stepped along towards his barn. I walked over and we had a talk."

"What's the present status of the Burke and Bodin injunction?" asked the reporter. "How does that affair get along?"

"Don't know a thing about it," said the sheriff.

"Didn't one of your deputies serve the papers?"

"I saw by the papers that he did, or tried to, but I know nothing about it."

"You don't mean to say that your deputies do things that you don't know anything about?" exclaimed the reporter.

"That's about the size of it," said Sheriff Pender, "and I propose to find out about it, too. Hoyt (the county solicitor) says he used to do business that way with Coffin and Weston. Perhaps he did; perhaps he didn't. Coffin and Weston didn't have any property, though. I've got property, and I'm responsible for the acts of my deputies. I could lose something, for I've got it to lose. I'm going to ascertain my rights."

"Don't you have the power of naming or displacing your deputies?"

"You bet I do," was the decided response, "but I'm not ready to talk just yet."

"What do you think about affairs in Auburn, Mr. Pender?" asked the Mirror man.

"I think if I were let alone," he replied, earnestly, "I could run the saloon end of Auburn with satisfaction to the town of Auburn and the city of Manchester."

"Well, you're the man everybody's looking for," the reporter told him. "How would you go about it?"

"Give me Jim Dunn and the other officer here, let me have a talk with the dealers, and I'll get up some regulations that'll be lived up to. You know it's a farce to let Tom, Dick and Harry have a case of beer or a barrel of beer in a boat house out here, where they can get what they want and still have it impossible for a boy and his girl to come out here and get a sandwich and a bottle of beer apiece. That isn't justice. It isn't equality. I could fix this thing all right if they'd let me do it."

"You could probably make them toe the mark all right," said the reporter. "You know you could close them all up tomorrow if you wanted to. Couldn't you?"

"You bet I could," said the sheriff, "and they all know it."

Mr. Pender is one of the most agreeable officials the reporter has met in a long while. He has a jolly good word for everybody. At this point in the interview Ben McPherson came along. "Hello, young fellow," says the sheriff, "wish I had some good news for you."

"I wish you had, too," says Ben, who was recently served with a temporary injunction under the nuisance act. Just then a train steamed in, and after a brief talk with McPherson, High Sheriff Pender climbed aboard and the train left for Portsmouth. The lake had a closed, dry appearance, all the day long.—Manchester Mirror.

WHY LOBSTERS ARE SCARCE.

"Lobsters are scarcer than ever before," said a fisherman today. "Despite the good prices offered by the summer visitors along this coast we are unable to supply the demand. The present dearth of lobsters has been predicted for years, and it has come despite the fact that the United States Fish Commission has planted millions of lobsters along the Atlantic coast for several years past."

"I understand that the Commission has now become alarmed over the scarcity of lobsters. The Fish Commission's steamer Grampus has, as the latest report, started along the Maine coast on a roving cruise to buy female lobsters and transplant them to the hatcheries at Gloucester. The Grampus was here a short while the other day. Various reasons are advanced for the scarcity of lobsters along the New England coast, and most of the fishermen admit that the abundance of traps is responsible for the extermination. I believe that the reason for the scarcity is that too many of the undersized ones have been caught and sold in the past. I was talking with a Massachusetts fisherman recently and he is of the opinion that the cold currents from the north are running too close to the coast this year to make lobsters and bluefish plenty. A member of the Fish Commission states that fully 90 per cent of the canned lobsters used in the United States now come from the British provinces and that the price of lobsters will hereafter go higher than ever."

AN ENJOYABLE OCCASION.

The annual banquet of the Exeter board of trade, served at the Casino, Hampton Beach, Wednesday evening, though held later in the season than those of previous years, was more largely attended than any previous event of the kind. The menu was an elaborate one and the guests were profuse in their remarks of appreciation. During the banquet music was furnished.

The post prandial exercises were conducted by Dr. Albert S. Wetherell, president of the board. The treat of the evening was the readings of Register of Deeds George F. Richards, who recited the following selections: "An Object Lesson in Shakespeare," "Mine Family," by Jacob Straus, "Waking the Young Uns," "Bigen on the Rhine," "A Schoolboy's First Attempt at Public Speaking," and "Tramp, a Xmas Story." Brief remarks were also made by many of the leading citizens of the town. Later in the evening, an informal dance was held.

A PECULIAR ARREST.

The circumstances connected with the arrest here of Edward Warren, one of the boys who escaped from the State Industrial school, were rather peculiar. Officer Anderson was patrolling his beat on State street about eight o'clock Wednesday evening, when the youth stepped up and made known his identity. He said that he thought of course the officer would be notified of his description and pick him out anyway.

Concerning the whereabouts of his associates Warren had little to say. He thought that Gammon, who left the school at the same time, was captured in the woods just out of the city. He would say nothing more. Warren belongs in Claremont, and was one of the last to take his departure from the school.

BUYING UP GRANITE QUARRIES.

Messrs. Perkins and McHale, the agents of O'Brien and Sheehan of New York who have been inspecting the site for the new dry dock at this navy yard, were in Biddeford, Me., a few days ago, looking over granite quarries there with a view to purchasing them. A part of the granite will be used on the new stone dock at Charlestown, Mass., which O'Brien and Sheehan are to construct, and the rest will go into the Portsmouth dock, should the New York firm secure the contract to build it, which now seems quite likely.

TEA TABLE TALK.

Said Supt. Robinson of the State Industrial school this morning, as he sat in the police station, "We have several of your Portsmouth boys up at the school, and they are doing finely, too. They're well behaved and industrious little workers, and never give us any trouble. One in particular named Barrett I consider as bright a boy as there is at the school today."

Postmaster Bartlett has begun his regime by instituting a number of changes which serve to better accommodate the public. His latest accomplishment in improving the local system is that of getting the afternoon mail from New York in here at three o'clock instead of five, which cannot fail to be generally appreciated. He obtained this concession through the department at Washington this week.

Since Colonel Ingersoll's death I have frequently heard people query what the great agnostic's religion really was. Here is his own statement of his creed:

"To love justice, to long for the right, to love mercy, to pity the suffering, to assist the weak, to forget wrongs and remember benefits—to love the truth, to be sincere, to utter honest words, to love liberty, to wage relentless war against slavery in all its forms, to love wife and child and friend, to make a happy home, to love the beautiful in art, in nature, to cultivate the mind, to be familiar with the mighty thoughts expressed, the noble deeds of all the world, to cultivate courage and cheerfulness, to make others happy, to fill life with the splendor of generous acts, the warmth of loving words, to discard error, to destroy prejudice, to receive new truths with gladness, to cultivate hope, to see the calm beyond the storm, the dawn beyond the night, to do the best that can be done and then be resigned: This is the religion of reason, the creed of silence. This satisfies the brain and heart."

Supt. Meloon of the P. K. & Y. will have to change his Sea Point concert a couple of times this week. Thursday, each week. That evening has become a hoodoo. The rain is almost sure to fall then, and I don't know but Friday, abused as it has been by superstitious people, would serve Mr. Meloon's plans better in a weather way. A big crowd would have gone over to the Point tonight, had it been clear.

Those women, who, for a dollar or two, have several shivers, roll their eyes wildly and go into a "trance," in which condition they tell you anything you want to know about this world, the next and all the others, cannot all be genuine. A week ago or so a young man was drowned in a lake near Enfield. Divers couldn't find his body. A Mrs. Titus from Boston, or some other fraud center, went up, had a spasm and said that the body lay in a cavity about fifty feet from shore. A diver promptly went down and as promptly came up again, with the report that the cavity was about as big as a bean pot, with not more than six inches of mud over it. Mrs. Titus has another guess coming.

CALDWELL GOES 12 MILES IN 21M. 48 S.

Harry Caldwell of Manchester, one of the participants in the 20 mile motor paced race which will be held in connection with the carnival of cycle racing Tuesday afternoon at Waltham, Mass., tried his speed for 12 miles yesterday behind his motor machine. He covered the distance in 21m 48s, and he rode his last mile in 1m 38s, which shows his wonderful staying qualities. Orlando Stevens of the famous circuit team "I and Stevie," which is now training at Waltham, picks Caldwell to defeat such men as Elkes, Linton, Pierce, Downey, and Steenson.

Stevens is not alone in his opinion, as it is shared by other good judges who have watched them all ride.

JOHNNIE STEWART STILL MISSING.

Nothing has been learned up to this afternoon concerning the whereabouts of Johnnie Stewart, who mysteriously disappeared on Monday. It is known that he told some of the boys that he intended to run away. He wore his oldest, shabbiest suit, and so far as is known had not over half a dollar in his pocket.

ELIOT, Aug. 8.

The funeral of Clyde M. twin son of Irving L. and Mabel R. Goodwin of Dover, N. H., occurred Monday the 7th. There was a prayer at their home, 176 Mt. Vernon street at 12 o'clock by Rev. W. H. Haskell. The remains were brought to Eliot, and funeral services held at the home of the grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. John F. Raitt, at 2:30 o'clock, Rev. F. C. Potter officiating. Mr. and Mrs. J. Frank Paul and Mrs. Lucy Frost rendered appropriate music. Loving friends covered tables with flowers and scattered them around and beneath the beautiful white casket that held a more beautiful form, aged only 9 months and 23 days. Interment took place in the family lot, Tasker and Chesley having charge.

HAMPTON BEACH.

Mrs. H. L. Road of Exeter and her daughters, Mrs. W. H. Nute and Miss Josephine, are at the Nudd-Ross house.

The Board's Head house has had as a recent guest Miss Dorothy Hughes, the famed violinist of the Sousa band. She was with Dr. Carter of Concord, and they were a merry pair of guests.

Mrs. M. Cann of Boston is a late arrival at the New Board's Head hotel.

The Methodist society of Hampton held a picnic at the beach Wednesday.

The fine beach cottage being built near the casino for the E. H. and A. railway has a rear part 12x32 and a rounded front 10x18, making a handsome structure in quite a new style. It is very likely the proposed 45 room hotel to be built for the company will be located next year between this cottage and the casino.

crad, lectures this afternoon on "Experiences of Frontier Life." Other speakers booked for the near future are: August 12, Walter Page, Boston, editor Atlantic Monthly, "The Negro in the South;" August 13, Rev. E. H. Powell, Clinton, N. Y., "Farming in the Twentieth Century."

WILL RUN FOR CONGRESS ON A PLATFORM ALL HIS OWN.

An innovation in the race for congressional honors in the First district is to be furnished by Col. John G. Crawford of Manchester, who will run upon nomination papers independently and upon a platform of his own construction. Colonel Crawford is an anti-Imperialist of the most pronounced type and anti-Imperialism is to be one of the heavy planks in his platform.

For years the colonel has been at work for the Republican party, but the only reward which he has received was a consulate at Coaticook, P. R., which he held for three years. In 1898, he was a candidate for the nomination secured by Cyrus A. Salloway.

Colonel Crawford now realizes that he would have no chance in a nominating convention, and he does not propose to enter the race in that way.

He says: "I realize that my finances would not be sufficient to enable me to make a successful contest in the convention, but I will run independently and give the Republicans the hottest fight they have seen for years. I believe that I have many friends in both parties, a sufficient number to make a lively battle, if not to secure a seat in Congress."

STATE HIGHWAY COMMISSIONERS MEET TODAY.

The commissioners appointed by the governor and council to lay out a state highway between the Massachusetts line and the Piscataquog river hold a meeting today in Manchester for preliminary organization and to discuss the proposed route.

No plans have been formulated definitely, but the commissioners intend to take up the matter and discuss it thoroughly with a view to arriving at the best solution of the problems presented.

The commission is composed of Messrs. Albert Shedd of Nashua, Perry H. Dow and Gordon Woodbury of Manchester.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 10, 1899.

General Eagan's statement that he expects soon to be reinstated in his old position is the most optimistic declaration that has been heard this summer.

Hon. Jerry Simpson tells the people of Kansas that they will be sorry if they don't elect him to the United States senate. On the other hand the senate will be sorry if they do.

Admiral Dewey ought to have accepted those three horse tails offered to him by the sultan. They would come in very handy if he should ever have another brush with the Spaniards.

The sultan of Sulu is evidently a student of American character. He says that when one American is scratched all the rest blaze up like a box of matches. The sultan has a long head.

Occasionally the Princess of Wales forgets her royal surroundings long enough to talk with the neighbors about the best way in which to have one of her old party gowns made over.

Seven different actresses have announced their intention to play Hamlet next season. They might heighten the novelty of their respective performances by engaging men to play Ophelia.

Mrs. Mary Ellen Lease is taking lessons in spiritualism. She will doubtless soon be able to call spirits from the vasty as successfully as she used to call populist victory from the windy caves of Kansas.

It is unfair to Col. Bryan to condemn him for paying taxes on a magnificent family carriage. The colonel would look very much out of place, when at tending a populist picnic in Nebraska or Kansas, if he did not ride in a turn-out as good as the farmers use.

In big red letters, spread across the top of its first page, the Kansas City Journal hurls this awful threat at the head of the British lion: "If We Fight Over the Canadian Boundary Line, There Will Be No Boundary Line When We Get Through." And no more there won't.

One of the Paris journals—the "Figaro"—boasts that the United States would never dare to raise the Monroe doctrine against a European nation. This able journalist evidently forgets that originally the Monroe doctrine was raised against the whole batch of European nations. That's exactly what it is for.

Dispatches from Honolulu announce that the town of Hilo, which was threatened with destruction by the molten lava from the volcano of Mauna Loa, is no longer in danger, the stream having changed its course. At one time the volcano seemed likely to destroy every thing, including Hilo, Jack and game.

Indians are on the war path in Mexico, and the government is shooting them down. The "aunties" will doubtless be horrified at this news, remembering that the Indians originally owned all America, and were doing very well until a lot of Europeans came over and took possession without the consent of the governed.

EXPERIENCED RELIGIOUS EXHILARATION.

Boston, Aug. 9.—3000 people paid ten cents admission to the People's temple tonight to see the Jewett and Baker family. While Mr. J. W. A dozen people in the audience led her to a seat.

STEVENS MEETS A RAJAH.

His Experience in a Stucco Royal Palace.

At the door of the stucco palace a dishevelled sentry presented arms with more than the usual fervor. Then I understood—and perceived coming slowly, slowly, and quite noiselessly toward me down a corridor a small human figure. It wore a white turban, a tabard of blue silk lined with salmon satin, a long muslin scarf round the neck, snow-white linen drawers, tight, yet shapeless, and white cotton socks. It came up, always quite noiselessly, appearing to be moved rather than to move; I saw a brown face, melting black eyes, a long-haired, fine-haired, oiled, black beard.
The figure took my hand in a hand that seemed made of soufflet, and with the same mysterious, unmovable motion led me across a high-roofed hall, with chandeliers like forest-trees and the paint peeling off the skirting-board, into a verandah that overlooked a resplendent chasm of torrent bed and a lowering heave of mountain beyond. He sat me in a chair beside him, the interpreter opposite, then turned and fixed his eyes on me. If the movements were inhuman the eyes were unearthly. Eyes weary beyond all saying—uttering passionless and purposeless—as if their owner neither desired anything nor intended anything, had neither never had interest in the world or had quite flushed with it. Looking into those black pools of sheer emptiness, you wondered whether he were a newborn baby or a million years old; you almost wondered if he were alive or dead.

That was the Rajah. And then, in a voice that seemed to fall among us from nowhere, he told the fat-cheeked, gold-spectacled babu to tell me he trusted I was in the enjoyment of good health!
Awhile the conversation floated at this level, and I began to think that this Rajah—this Rajah—was—if one may so speak of princes—a fool. But presently the Rajah's conversation began to take a definite subject, and the Rajah was instructing me on the political question of the hour. It does not matter to you what the question was; it did not matter to me. The interest to me lay in comparing what the Rajah suggested with what I knew to be true. In black and white he said nothing, but he hinted words. The suggestions were so subtly nebulous that you could hardly be sure they meant anything at all; the subject seemed to be in the air rather than in his conversation. I found it quite impossible to speak a language so evasive, and had to fly to brutal verbs and nouns. He accepted my remarks, though with deprecation of the bluntness, so that at least I had the satisfaction of knowing we were both talking about the same thing.

But the astonishing and inhuman feature of his talk was that he continually conveyed to me views of the questions of the hour which I knew to be false, which he knew me to know to be false. At least, he knew that I came with the President, and might have known that I would ask him about things and believe what he said. Yet, without the least encouragement, he insinuated and insinuated and insinuated away, till I felt almost a traitor to sit and listen to him. He cannot have thought I should take his side, or that I could be of any service to him if I did, that he appeared to me nothing. Intrigue was his nature, and in default of a better confidence he kept his hand in by trying to intrigue with me.

And then suddenly, without a flicker in the eyes of either Rajah or interpreter.
"His Highness hopes that on your return to your country you will write to him from time to time and give him your advice on affairs of State."
I gasped. "His Highness has heard much of your good name and high reputation," pursued the bland, relentless voice—he had first heard, and forgotten, my name three hours before—"and he is sure that your opinion on the government of his country would be very valuable to him."
And while I still gazed, His Highness motionlessly rose, handed me out of the chair with his soufflet-touch, and prattled, in English, "Do not forget me."—London Mail.

The British Cook and Rice Pudding.

The British cook, writes W. L. Alden in Pearson's, who is told to make a rice pudding will take some flour, a few eggs and as much milk as she can spare from the mistress's tea, and all the rice that is left in the rice jar. She mixes these ingredients, and after putting the composition in the oven wonders what it will turn out to be. Sometimes the result is a plum cake. At another time it is a stum pudding and at another it is a stum pudding. Statistics show that it becomes a rice pudding only once in four hundred and seventy-seven times.
There is all the charm of a lottery, or of gold mining, in British cookery. It is so purely a matter of chance that it is probable that rigid application of the cauldron laws would land every British cook in jail. The cook stakes her flour and butter and eggs, in the hope that they will emerge from the oven in some desirable form. If she wins, her employer regards her as an admirable cook. If she loses, and the oven returns to her a dish which is absolutely uneatable, her employer wonders why she can never learn to cook. So long as the British cook prefers chance to science, and thinks that it is simpler to take "some" of various ingredients instead of taking a definite and unalterable number of grams of each, so long will British cookery remain among the mysteries of life.

She Came Back.

A sturdy old Boer farmer living in the Free States had a shrewd wife, but had long rendered his wife anything but a couch of roses.
One day not long ago she, in a fit of pique packed up her goods and left him, vowing never to come back. The news went around among the neighbors, and at night several of them came to console with him. He sat on his front porch puffing away at his pipe. "Hans," remarked one of his neighbors, "I'll tell you."
"My boy," replied the honest Dutchman, as he gurgledly knocked the ashes out of his pipe, "you've right, she has shut me back."—Spare Moments.

THE HERALD.

A BEACH TRIP.
 Nantasket and Bass Point are highly favored outing and recreation resorts, and to reach either of them one must take a delightful steamer trip down Boston harbor, which in itself is a rare treat. When at the beaches one finds bathing facilities of the very best. The amusements are indeed a prominent feature at both Nantasket and Bass Point, and embrace nearly every known contrivance. Both resorts are known far and wide for the excellent shore dinners that are served, and the price is merely nominal. The Boston and Maine railroad will run a low rate excursion from here to Boston with the option of a harbor trip to either Bass Point or Nantasket, on August 14th, and the round trip will cost but $1.50 and a special train will convey the excursionists to and from Boston. There will be a championship game of ball at the South End grounds between the Boston and Cincinnati on the day of the excursion, and those who would rather take in the game can do so by surrendering the coupon for the harbor excursion, for arrangements have been made whereby the coupon will be accepted at the grounds for an admission.

A GOOD TIME FOR THE CHILDREN.
 The gala day of the season at Old Orchard is always Children's Day, which this year comes on August 16th, and a very elaborate programme has been arranged. Exercises of a musical and literary character will be held, and that they will be interesting goes without saying, for those in charge are experts, and in fact everything possible has been done to make this day of happiness long to be remembered by the young people. There is bathing and boating and sundry other diversions for them, while the great ocean pier is always an attraction for all, for the concerts and fishing and cool breezes are enticing. Extra low rates have been made for the children from many stations on the Boston & Maine system, and special trains will convey the excursionists to and from Ocean park.

PORTRAIT OF DANIEL WEBSTER.
 J. Warren Towle visited Portsmouth Tuesday and called upon U. D. Tenney, the well known artist of that city, in regard to painting a full portrait picture of Daniel Webster. In 1852, when Mr. Towle was a student at Harvard law school, he raised the sum of $952, with which he purchased a portrait of Daniel Webster, which now hangs in Austin hall at Cambridge. Mr. Tenney has agreed to paint a portrait, similar to the one at Austin hall for $300, the work to be done satisfactorily to Pres. Eliot of the Harvard college, Prof. A. C. Langdell of the Harvard law school, and Mr. Towle. Mr. Tenney will undoubtedly paint the portrait and it will be placed in the court house here.—Exeter Gazette.

SEE AND BE HAPPY.
 The twenty-fourth annual Rochester fair occurs Sept. 12, 13, 14 and 15, 1899, when its brilliant exposition will again capture the plaudits of the public, with a mammoth display from field, garden and orchard, representative exhibits of manufacture and art, horses, cattle, sheep, swine and poultry. Ten thousand dollars in purses and premiums will be offered this year and there will be three spirited speed contests each day for liberal purses. A continuous stage show, something going on to please all the time. An elaborate street parade this year, and four bands will furnish music. Reduced rates on all railroads.

FIFTIETH ANNIVERSARY.
 Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ellis of the Ocean house, York Beach, celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage on Saturday next. A reception at that popular hotel will be tendered them in the evening by the guests of the house, followed by dancing.

CAR LEAVES THE RAILS.
 The rear trucks of the big open car, No. 21, on the local line, left the rails on Market square about ten o'clock on Wednesday evening, the 9th inst., and delayed the travel about fifteen minutes. It was finally got back on the irons and travel resumed.

WANTS TO RETURN TO JAIL.
 Willis Jenness of Rye, who was ordered by the supreme court to pay to Clara Brown the sum of $25 and $2.50 per week for the support of her illegitimate child, says that he can't do it and wants the sheriff to take him back into jail, but the sheriff hasn't the authority to do so.

PRICE OF SHOES TO GO UP.
 The object of the convention of shoe manufacturers held in Philadelphia this week was to raise the price of shoes, which it is stated has been too low for the past year or two. The rise in the price of shoes will be general, and it is said to have been made necessary by the advanced price of leather, nails, etc. The advance will vary from five cents to twenty-five, according to the grade of the shoe.

TO CURE CONSTIPATION FOREVER.
 Take Cassarets Candy Cathartic, 10c or 25c. It cures C. C. C. in 10 to 15 days, no matter how long it has been there, and it is the only medicine that cures C. C. C. forever.

A lazy liver makes a lazy man. Burdock Blood Bitters is the natural, never failing remedy for a lazy liver. Flatulence is cured by BERKMAN'S PILLS.

THE ONLY CUCUMBER.

But Then She Was Too Fresh—She Could Be Easily Picked.
 She was attired in a red bicycle suit, stockings that would be indicted under the charge of bawl and tumult in quiet places like Dover and Philadelphia, and her curly locks, bleached to a very light shade by Old Sol or some other chemist, were surrounded by a straw sailor hat, in one side of which arose to an enormous altitude a long sweeping feather about the size of an ordinary cavalry sabre. She was the only cookie in the cupboard and somebody had firmly convinced her of the fact. Her wheel, if she owned one, was home at lunch and she was traveling by the P. K. and Y. When the conductor came around she tendered him a bill to take her fare from and then in a tone of voice which was meant to be perfectly audible all over the car said: "At what hour do we get back to Portsmouth? I wish to catch the coach for the Wentworth, where I am stopping."

The conductor assured the young lady that she would be in Portsmouth in time to connect with the coach and she settled back with a look of extreme satisfaction at the attention which she had attracted. Soon afterwards a sharp featured female, who had all the qualifications of a village gossip, got on the car and sat down next to the girl in red. The latter had evidently "seen her first" and had turned around in the seat so as to present the back part of her jauntily clad figure to the newcomer. The next assessment by the conductor, however, straightened up the girl in red enough so that the "rubber neck" next to her recognized her.

"Why, how do you do Mary? I haven't seen you since you left Donovan's and went over to the Peters's to work. How do you like?" Mary evidently didn't like for she gave the bell a spiteful yank and got off the car where houses were scarce and blueberries quite thick.

PICKERING VS. DE ROCHEMONT.
 A Case Which Hangs on the Endorsement of a Note.
 Gee Pickering of this city has brought suit against Harry De Rochemont of Newington for obtaining under false pretences his (Pickering's) signature, as the endorser of a note for three hundred dollars, made out to William Quinn. The case was opened in the office of Justice Adams this forenoon, but was adjourned to next Tuesday morning at ten o'clock, to allow the defendant time to secure counsel. John H. Bartlett appeared for Pickering. DeRochemont was held under two sureties of five hundred each.

TOMBOY WON 2:10 TROT AT OLD ORCHARD.
 The Portsmouth horse, Tomboy, driven by the veteran Tom Marsh, had no trouble whatever in winning the 2:10 trot at the Old Orchard races on Wednesday, capturing it in three straight heats.

When it became known that Tomboy was to carry Frank Jones' colors in the $1000 stake at Readville's grand circuit meeting instead of the lion-hearted Kingmond, not a few people thought both Tom Marsh and Dan Mahoney were losing their reason. Today those same men are wondering, for Tomboy stepped three miles Wednesday afternoon that made her look as dangerous in that class as some of the other entries.

TO START AT READVILLE.
 The following horses from the Hon. Frank Jones' racing stable are entered in the grand circuit races at Readville, Aug. 21—25: Betonica, 2:10 class, pacing; Tom Boy, 2:13 class, trotting; also Daniel, Belle Ramsey, or Sprague Nutwood; Kingmond, 2:30 class, trotting; Idolita, New England futurity, for $10,000.

Tom Marsh and Dan Mahoney will look after the interests of these noble steppers from Maplewood farm.
